Survival Books. Paperback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, London's Cafes, Coffee Shops & Tearooms: 2016, David Hampshire, This book is a celebration of London's flourishing independent cafes, coffee shops and tearooms - and venues serving afternoon tea and breakfast/brunch - all of which have enjoyed a renaissance in the last decade and done much to strengthen the city's position as one of the world's leading foodie destinations. Londoners and visitors now enjoy artisan coffee and specialist teas from around the world, along with delicious homemade food influenced by the wealth of immigrants who have made London the world's most multicultural city. The number and variety of independent cafes in London has flourished in recent years and if London never had a cafe culture a few decades ago, it certainly does now! The quality and variety of food and drink on offer has also improved beyond recognition in the last few decades, with many cafes' now serving food that's indistinguishable from a quality restaurant - except when it come to the bill - which is invariably much lower. In fact if you want to eat a great lunch (and increasingly dinner too) in London and don't want to pay a fortune, a cafe is your best bet. Coffee sales in Britain have expanded rapidly in the last decade, along with the growing number of independent (and chain) coffee shops. Britain's love affair with the bean has gone, quite literally, from strength to strength; not so many years ago it was difficult to find a cafe serving anything but insipid filter coffee, but now fresh bean-powered brews are everywhere, thanks in huge part to a legion of expat baristas and roasters from Down Under. The British are famous for their love of a good cuppa (tea) - which, as every Brit knows,...
