Book Condition: New. Publisher/Verlag: Springer, Berlin | This book presents a collection of invited contributions, each reflecting an area of biomedicine in which simulation techniques have been successfully applied. Thus, it provides a state-of-the-art survey of simulation techniques in a variety of biomedical applications. Chapter one presents the conceptual framework for advanced simulations such as parallel processing in biological systems. Chapter two focuses on structured biological modeling based on the bond graph method. This is followed by an up-to-date account of advanced simulation of a variety of sophisticated biomedical processes. The authors provide many insights into how computer simulation techniques and tools can be applied to research problems in biomedicine. The idea for this book arose out of the daily work by experts in their field and reflects developing areas. Therefore, I think the material is timely and hope that the work described will be an encouragement for others. It is the objective of this book to present advanced simulation techniques in biomedicine and outline current research, as well as to point out open problems, in this dynamic field. Finally, I wish to express my thanks to those colleagues who have made this book possible with their contributions. | Parallel Processing in Biological Systems.- Multicomputers in simulation.- Evolution in simulation oriented digital computers.- Classification of multicomputers.- Parallel simulation.- Simulation of biological systems and its need for parallel processing.- Simulation example on the AD10 multicomputer.- Concluding notes.- References.- An Elementary Bond Graph Approach to Structured Biological Modeling.- The need for unified graphical structured modeling.- General lines of the presentation.- Bond graph representation of energetical systems.- Hypergraph representation of energetical lumped systems.- The set EP of elementary parts or nodes.- The two elementary connection branches.- Bond graphs: A representation of a subclass of energetical hypergraphs.- The chemical energy domain.- Chemical EBG variables..
