Editors American Farmer: The rotting and dropping of Apples has long been a great hindrance to fruit-growers in this country. One reason of fruit dropping before maturity is its being pulled off before thoroughly ripe, which causes the bark to grow more than the wood of the tree, and when the bark of a tree becomes very thick it binds the tree or the wood I of the tree so that it cannot grow, and the fruit drops. Another cause is the sapsuckers picking i holes in the bark, and the wood lice and other insects sucking the sap of the tree. No doubt there are other causes, hut I will not mention them in this communication, but proceed to give a remedy from my own experience. For the past fourteen years I have tried it with great success. First, if I have an. old tree that rots or drops its fruit, about the twenty-first or twenty-second day of June, the longest days in the year, I take a saw and saw off all the dead limbs close to the main trunk; then I take my pocket-knife and cut through the bark to the sap wood all around the tree just under the lowest limbs. Then I split the tree from that down to the ground; then with the knife and my fingers, I commence to prize off the bark at the point where I commenced to split the tree down....
